The Pulpit

A SERMON BY THE REV. IRA W. HENDERSON

Subject: Jesus the Preacher.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Preaching at the Irving Square Presbyterian Church, on the theme "Jesus the Preacher," the Rev. Ira Wemmell Henderson, pastor, took Mark 2:2, "And He preached the Word unto them" as his text. He said:

The sharp line between preaching and teaching is very hardly drawn. The preacher who amounts to anything at all ought to be a good teacher, instructor of men. It does not necessarily follow conversely that a good teacher will be as ready when preaching is the need. But the preacher must be a teacher does he wish for success in the saving of the world of souls. He who would be an influence for and toward God must be able not only to declare to men what is the way we should live that we may attain to eternal life, but also he must be able to unfold to mankind how he may find the way and keep to its middle on the march toward heaven.

But lest we drift from the theme in hand, let us to the point. Jesus was the greatest preacher the world has ever seen, and He stands to-day as the Master and the inspiration of all those who would tell His truth. Glorious as are the messages of the prophets are to their people and their day, and rich as are the utterances of the long line of spirit-filled men who have since Christ preached the Gospel of God unto men, Jesus yet holds the premier place as the mightest messenger of them all.

Let us for these minutes, while we are here together, glance at several salient qualities in the preaching of Jesus which commend Him to us that us not waste our time in speculation over the sort of gestures He may have used or the oratorical powers we may conceive Him to have possessed. Let us rather get down to the kind of gospel He preached, and to a consideration of those elements of reaching-force in it, which have so captured and held the attention and the lives of men throughout these many years.

First and foremost Jesus preached the Gospel—the good news to men—that men could be saved from sin through the unwavering love of the Father. Knowing that sin is the deep and engrossing godless fact of life, and knowing also that the one desire of men when at their best is to be emancipated from sin, Jesus wasted no time over non-essentials, secondary or inconsequential things, but came straight to the point. Jesus took no time to prove the existence of God—He took that fact for granted. Christ spent no moments to make it clear that sin really does exist—that too He left to be the consciousness of every normal man. Jesus asked no man's word or no be was hungering or thirsting for a sure salvation from sin, but rather gave the gospel straight without question. Repent and believe and follow. These are the three of the great words that Jesus sent to the hearts of men: "Repent ye may and all unto God; humble yourself in His presence, asking pardon for your sins." "Mine is the revelation of the Father in all His fullness which is the only way to know God in His character and love." "Follow after Me, do as I do, act as I act, walk as I walk, think as I think, love as I love—for I walk in the simplicity of our Father—and then shall ye grow from grace unto grace." These are three of the mighty words of Jesus to amazing men. And they are the essence of the Gospel. No philosophy is deeper than the Gospel, no story is more simple, no truth more full of power, and it is because the Gospel meets and administers to the deepest need of men that it is to-day as it has ever been the redemptorist influence in our world. Because it shows hope of escape from sin it lifts the criminal unto Christ. Because it is so simple and so satisfying it reaches the hearts of little children yet unlearned in the mysteries of life. A message of pure and found and universal truth it challenges the thinker and meets his tests. To all men, and to all conditions, ranks and abilities among men the good news has its application and its mission. And it is because the Gospel is the universal message, simple, inspiring message that it is, that it has made such a hold over the hearts of men.

In the second place, I would call your attention to the fact that the Gospel was definitely preached by Jesus to the desperately poor, to the downtrodden and the weary. In His day the rich had all they needed and more besides, and there was no to give them as much more as possible. For the publican and the sinner, for the oppressed and sick and the disheartened no such care was taken. They were allowed very largely to shift for themselves. But Jesus overturned the system with His Gospel and talked first to those whose need was greatest. And "the common people heard Him gladly."

In the third place Jesus went out to the people with the Gospel. He did not wait for them to come to Him, but rather sought them out. It made no difference to the Lord whether men came to Him or He went to them, whether He had one man or five thousand to whom He spake the truth, whether men came by night or climbed up into the trees in the broad glare of the hot Eastern sun to see Him, whether they made a clamor by the wayside or just silently and steadily touched the hem of His garment. When men would not come to the synagogues to hear Him preach and teach—that is to say to church—He went out into the streets of the city and up on the hillsides and brought the word of salvation to them.

Now, to be sure, we have merely touched upon a very few of the elements which are characteristic of the preaching of Jesus. But so far as we have gone the lessons from the preaching of Jesus to the men of to-day are unmistakably definite and clear. And the lessons three are these: First, we should preach the Gospel; the simple story of salvation from sin through the love of God in Christ. Secondly, we should preach that Gospel not only to those who are rich, but to those also who are poor, whose misery is crushing and whose necessity is so urgent, whose hearts are so saddened and whose hope is almost gone. And lastly, we should carry the message of salvation out to where men are. If they will not come into our churches—and God knows may times it is more our fault than theirs that they do not come—then must we go out after them and compel them to come in—not first into church, but into the kingdom.

First, we should preach the Gospel. "Tell me the old, old story," is not mere sentiment set to music, but the outcry of breaking and hungry hearts and souls that are ready and eager to know the truth in Jesus Christ. And for my part, I, as a minister of the Gospel, believe the call of men should be answered. Answered not with theoretical and doctrinal discussion, not with recitals of our doubts and differences upon points that are non-essential, but with that simple and eternal truth upon which our hearts are stayed and through which the souls of men about us may be saved. The mission of the church is to bring the story of salvation unto humanity and I for my part am very sorry for the Christian brother whose soul is jarred into discord rather than swung into harmony with redemption's glorious song when those whom Christ has commissioned to preach His word call men to Jesus and bid them to take a stand for Christ. The Christian who objects to the methods of Jesus Christ needs to go to His knees and get a new baptism from above.

Therefore, we must preach a universal Gospel—a Gospel that shall reach every man. Jesus died for all, for my part, will have neither part nor communion with any conception of God's people who would make distinction or cast a single one empty handed and free-hearted admission to the house of God. And I think I voice the opinion of this household of faith when I say that all men of whatsoever race, character or condition who wish to hear the good news of God into eternal life through Jesus Christ are welcome to this church. And the church of God is to be the power unto toward men of low degree and men of high degree, men of culture and grace and numbers, and the more it shall do the will of Him who has sealed her as His own.

Let us not forget that we ought to do definite, energetic, widespread personal and collective work for Jesus. It is not the center of Our command is not to sit there and wait for men to come to Jesus. And this church and every congregation of the Christian Church should do a far grander and a more wonderful work than it does if we would but go out to the novels and tell them the glad tidings that they so much need to hear.

How God Can Help.

God is never at a loss for means to protect His people. Sometimes the means are surprisingly simple.

With 300 men, armed with trumpets and lanterns, Gideon drove a vast army of Midianites like sheep and kites out of the land of the children of Israel.

The youth David, armed with a sling and a few pebbles, defeated and killed the thoroughly armed giant Goliath.

The prophet Elisha and his servant were alone at Dothan when they found themselves surrounded by a host of the King of Syria. But Elisha was not afraid. The Lord smote the Syrians with blindness, and they became harmless.

Felix of Nola on one occasion, when being pursued by the persecutor hid in a deep, dark cave. There he found a spot of sand growing. Coming to the cave, his enemies looked in but, seeing a cobweb across the mouth of the cave, they supposed he could not be there, as it would be broken. Felix heard them and thanked God for this cobweb philosophied: "With God, a spider's web becomes a stone wall and a spider's web."—Reformed Church Record.

The Conversion of Waste.

At the Engineering Exhibition just closed, considerable interest was manifested in a process which has proved to be of great commercial value. As exhibited in powder form, it resembles a collection of beautiful topaz crystals, which shine brightly in the light. It is another illustration of the scientific conversion of waste products into the principles which control in His kingdom, in this life.

We cannot lay too much emphasis upon the importance of the resurrection. It is in the resurrection of all Christian life and thought. A Christian that is not here, without a risen Christ is almost beyond our imagination. The Christ centers a disheartened band of men when Jesus was crucified. They would have been utterly confounded had not Jesus risen from the dead. The resurrection was essential to the certification of His power for this life and for the life hereafter.

The resurrection is the consummation of the Christ life. It is the climax. It is the finest flower of the Divine self-revelation. It takes hold, as does nothing else, in all our Christian experience and expectation upon the very heart-strings of humanity. It affords us reason for unquenchable, everlasting hopefulness. And to be hopeful is to be inspired, it is to be supremely blessed.

Unsettled Stairway.

In a recent suit in a Cincinnati court a lawyer was cross-examining a German, the point under inquiry being the relative position of the doors, windows and so forth in a house in which a certain transaction was alleged to have occurred.

"And now, my good man," the lawyer said, "will you be good enough to tell the court how the stairs run in your house."

The German looked dazed for a moment. "How do they run?" he repeated.

"Yes, how do they run?"

"Vell," continued the witness, "ven I am upstairs dey run down, and ven I am downstairs dey ran oop."—Harper's Weekly.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MARCH 20. BY THE REV. I. W. HENDERSON.

Subject: Easter Lesson, I Luke 15: 19-21, 55-58—Golden Text, I Cor. 15-20—Memory Verse, 57 —Commentary.

The resurrection is an historic fact; it is the inspiration of the Christian company of believers; it is the ground of the Christian's hope for eternal life; it is the reason for our steadfastness, our immutability in Christian service. If it is not a fact, if it be a fraud, then are we truly of all men most miserable.

The crucifixion of Jesus was the supreme test of His disciples. His death left them downcast, in confusion with grief, in a measure scattered. His resurrection was the signal for their reconsecration, the inspiration of their drooping spirits, their ground for undying hope. The crucifixion was necessary, in the scheme of God, to their individual salvation. The resurrection was necessary that their faith should be strengthened, that the church should be launched, that to-day we might have courage to fight the good fight and to finish the course that God hath prepared before us.

The resurrection is a fact. Few occurrences in history are better substantiated. There may, of course, be differences of opinion as to what was the exact content of the appearance, but there is no difference over the resurrection. But however we may differ in the form or fact of resurrection, on this we are all agreed. As this history attests, to us there is the finest flower of the Divine self-revelation. It takes hold, as does nothing else, in all our Christian experience and expectation upon the very heart-strings of humanity. It affords us reason for unquenchable, everlasting hopefulness. And to be hopeful is to be inspired, it is to be supremely blessed.

Alcohol for commercial purposes is safer than gasolene because it does not ignite from radiated heat; it can be extinguished when burning by water, while burning gasolene is only spread thereby; it radiates but little heat while aflame, differing greatly from gasolene in this respect.

Piedmont-Bedford Concentrated Iron and Alum Water.

Contains such a remarkable combination of natural minerals that it has made a reputation for itself by curing Chronic Diseases after many other treatments had failed;

Its equal cannot be found in the treatment of Indigestion, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Female Complaints, Malaria, Nervousness, Stomach and Bowel Disorders, Piles, Inactive Liver, Scrofula, and other Blood and Skin Diseases.

We do not claim that one bottle of this Water will cure a disease of long standing, as this would be impossible, but we have such confidence in what it will do for you, provided you will do your part by giving it a fair trial which will cost you nothing if it does not satisfy you.

This Concentrated Water cures Chronic Diseases, because it contains 20 different minerals, which are adapted to every organ of the human body, and when it is used, these minerals replace those which are diseased from the system, thus causing sickness.

If we cannot benefit you, we do not care for your money.

PE-RU-NA A MEDICAL COMPOUND

Is any medical compound as much depended upon the manner in which it is compounded as upon the ingredients used.

First, there must be a due proportion of the ingredients. Each drug in the pharmacopeia has its special action. To combine any drug with other drugs that have slightly different action, the combination must be made with strict reference to the use for which the compound is intended. The drugs may be well selected as to their efficacy, but the compound ENTIRELY SPOILED BY THE PROPORTION in which they are combined.

It takes years and years of experience to discover this proportion. There is no law of chemistry, of pharmacy, by which the exact balance of proportion can be determined. EXPERIENCE IS THE ONLY GUIDE.

In compounding a catarrh remedy Dr. Hartman has had many years' experience. In the use of the various ingredients which composed the catarrh remedy, Peruna, he has learned, little by little, how to harmonize the action of each ingredient, how to combine them into a stable compound, how to arrange them into such nice proportions as to blend the taste, the operation and the chemical peculiarities of each several ingredient in order to produce a pharmaceutical product beyond the criticism of doctors, pharmacists or chemists.

WE REPEAT, THAT AS MUCH DEPENDS ON THE WAY IN WHICH THE DRUGS ARE COMBINED AS DEPENDS UPON THE DRUGS THEMSELVES.

The compound must present a stability which is not affected by changes of temperature, not affected by exposure to the air, not affected by age. It must be so combined that it will remain just the same whether used in the logging or mining camps of the northwest or the coffee plantations of the tropics.

A complete list of the ingredients of Peruna would not enable any druggist or physician to compound it. It is the skill and sagacity by which these ingredients are brought together that give Peruna much of its peculiar curative and catarrh remedy.

However much virtue each ingredient of Peruna may possess, the value of the compound depends largely upon the manner and proportion in which they are combined. The right ingredients, and, what is further rightly, is the only way a medical compound can be made of real value.
